Kennedy-Weber House
134 S. Bond Street
Bel Air
Private

This would be the plainest kind of workingman's housing were it not for the bold scroll brackets to the porch posts. The house was built by blacksmith Jacob Kennedy.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

This two and a half story, three bay aluminum sided house is at 134 S. Bond Street in the Town of Bel Air, Harford County, Maryland. While it resembles many Bel Air houses built between 1870 and 1900 in layout, it lacks the ubiquitous front gable. The three bay by two bay gable roofed Main block has two corbell capped inside end chimneys. The ell (actually a T) is also unusual in that it springs from the middle of the west elevation of the main block, rather than the side two bays as is more common in Town. The two bay ell has a shed roof sloping to the south and an enclosed porch on the south side. A third corbell capped chimney is in the middle of the west elevation of the ell. The north elevation of the main block is blind save for a pair of four pane casements in the gable. The south elevation has the casements in the gable and two windows on each level. The windows of the house are 6/6 double-hung sash. The entrance is in the middle bay of the front (east) elevation. This is also uncommon; the entrance in a side bay is more common. The glass over panel door is topped by a two-pane transom.

The front porch has a hip roof carried on chamfered posts with scroll brackets.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

This plain house, adorned only by the scroll brackets on the front porch posts, was built in 1877 by blacksmith Jacob Kennedy on land he purchased for $400 from Jessie Frazier. Kennedy's smithy was two doors south on Bond. A picture of the smithy before 1904 is on page IV-3 in the Bel Air Centennial Book. This house and the smithy appear on the 1878 map. On the 1904 insurance map the smithy, where the boot maker's shop is today, has a different shape than it did in the picture.

This house is essentially a one family owned house, for the current owner is descended from Jacob Kennedy through Kennedy's daughter, Lydia A. Weber.

The house has had its side porch enclosed since 1930. The house, while roomy for 1877, is plain for the home of a master craftsman.
